Ken Verlander is an Associate in the Construction Department in the firm's New Orleans office. He represents clients in matters involving a variety of construction related litigation, including premises liability and third-party injury claims.

Ken's legal experience is complemented by nearly two decades of hands-on experience in the hospitality industry, where he developed a deep understanding of the operational and regulatory challenges faced by businesses. In his roles managing some of the most prestigious private clubs on the Gulf Coast, Ken gained valuable insights into project management, compliance, and customer service. His tenure in the industry has given him a practical perspective that he seamlessly integrates into his legal practice, providing clients with pragmatic and effective solutions.

Ken's background allows him to navigate complex construction issues with a unique lens, ensuring that his clients receive comprehensive and informed counsel. His commitment to excellence and client-focused approach makes him a valuable asset to our firm and an advocate that clients can trust with their most critical construction-related legal matters.
